SCREENING TRAVELERS AT THE AIRPORT TO PREVENT HIJACKING: A NEW CHALLENGE FOR THE UNCONSTITUTIONAL CONDITIONS DOCTRINE Thomas J. Andrews	657
Analyzing airport antihijacking procedures in light of the unconstitutional conditions doctrine, the author concludes that existing screening methods do not provide the least drastic means of protecting air travel. A model screening procedure which provides a less drastic alternative to the current system is proposed.
RIGHTS AND PRIORITIES OF SECURED CREDITORS OF PERSONALTY IN MEXICO John F. Munger	767
A thorough analysis of creditor's rights in personal property transactions under Mexican law is presented. The author analyzes the law governing installment sales, pledges, and chattel mortgages and reviews the rights and remedies of creditors.
Commentary
ARIZONA GROUND WATER LAW: THE NEED FOR LEGISLATION Robert Emmet Clark	799
The author reviews the development of Arizona ground water law and identifies existing problems. Two proposals intended to provide a basis for legislation implementing needed controls over the use and allocation of water resources are presented.
Notes
GUARANTY LETTERS OF CREDIT: PROBLEMS AND POSSIBILITIES John F. Battaile III	822
The guaranty letter of credit has been used increasingly as a security device in a variety of contexts. This Note examines the guaranty letter of credit and distinguishes it from the traditional form. Problems inherent in the use of the guaranty letter of credit are reviewed, and solutions that effectuate the security requirements of the contracting parties are proposed.
MINERAL PROSPECTING IN URBAN AREAS: A STUDY OF SURFACE AND MINERAL RIGHTS CONFLICTS UNDER THE STOCK-RAISING HOMESTEAD ACT Bruce A. Burke	860
The reservation of the subsurface mineral rights on stock-raising homestead land in the Western states has resulted in continuous conflicts between the mineral claimants and surface owners, particularly where intensive residential and commercial development has occurred. This Note examines the effects of the mineral development policy upon the surface uses and explores the possible solutions to surface-mineral rights conflicts.

PUBLIC ACCESS TO GOVERNMENTAL RECORDS AND MEETINGS IN ARIZONA	Douglas P. Mitchell	891
The right of individuals to attend meetings of governmental bodies and to view governmental documents is being reexamined by legislatures, courts, and the public. Reviewing Arizona's public access statutes, the writer concludes that the right is unnecessarily limited and suggests specific statutory changes, including a model public records act.
MALEVOLENT ACTS AND NUCLEAR POWER: ADDITIONAL PROTECTION UNDER NEPA AND THE ENERGY REORGANIZATION ACT OF 1974	John J. Deinken	920
An examination of the nuclear power industry indicates that substantial environmental damage may result from malevolent acts directed at nuclear facilities. The inadequacy of existing regulatory controls is demonstrated, and the writer proposes that the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974 and the National Environmental Policy Act require increased protection from such risks.
SOME LEGAL ASPECTS OF THE FUTURE TEST PERIOD IN UTILITY RATE REGULATION	Gail L. Gibbons	947
Volatile economic conditions and reliance on the historic test period for rate calculations has contributed to the financial difficulties currently facing public utilities. The writer considers the legal ramifications implicit in the use of an alternative method of rate regulation, the future test period, and examines these in light of existing Arizona law.
TITLE VII: A REMEDY FOR DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WOMEN PRISONERS	Kathryn Willcox Tate	974
The Equal Employment Opportunity Act, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, may provide a means of ensuring that female prisoners can obtain equal employment and rehabilitative opportunities. The writer reviews the applicable provisions of the Act and concludes that Title VII may, in fact, provide an appropriate remedy.
