THE EFFICACY OF FEDERAL AND STATE CONTROL OF WATER POLLUTION IN INTRASTATE STREAMS	Thomas J. Schoenbaum	1
Water pollution control on state and federal levels has recently produced confusion and conflict between the administrators of the respective programs. The author analyzes the major state and federal water pollution control laws applicable to intrastate streams from an empirical standpoint. Current alternative proposals are evaluated and recommendation is made for a regional program.
SAVING THE LAND-WATER EDGE FROM RECREATION, FOR RECREATION	Ludwik A. Teclaff and Eileen Teclaff	39
The authors examine the problems that arise in protecting the delicate and unique environment that exists in the narrow areas where the land meets the water. Proposals for allocating use of different edge zones for different purposes compatible with the ecology yet promotive of recreation are made.
SECTION 169 OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE: AN INCOME TAX SUBSIDY FOR THE CONTROL OF POLLUTION	Daniel Givelber and Daniel Schaffer	65
The Internal Revenue Code provision allowing a taxpayer to amortize the cost of a certified pollution control facility is analyzed both as to its tax and environmental aspects. The authors detail the inconsistencies and shortcomings of the section and explore the feasibility and efficacy of providing direct grants instead of tax subsidies.

Note

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL FINANCING CASES: INTERDISTRICT INEQUALITIES AND WEALTH DISCRIMINATION	Jeffrey H. Schwartz	88
Recent cases have held unconstitutional under the equal protection clause public financing systems that make the quality of a child's education a function of the taxable wealth of the school district in which he resides. The conceptual foundations and constitutional infirmities of state funding schemes are analyzed in the light of Serrano v. Priest , and alternative programs are considered.

Comments -

DETENTION FOR TAKING PHYSICAL EVIDENCE WITHOUT

PROBABLE CAUSE _____ P. Michael Drake 132

The Arizona legislature enacted a statute authorizing detention to conduct lineups and to take fingerprints, blood, hair, urine and other types of physical evidence from suspects, in the absence of probable cause to arrest. Constitutional arguments for and against such a detention are examined, and deficiencies in the statute are pointed out and suggestions are made to correct them.

ARIZONA WATER RESOURCE MANAGEMENT PROBLEMS CREATED BY THE CENTRAL ARIZONA PROJECT _____ James P. F. Egbert 158

The importation of water by the Central Arizona Project will create water resource management problems. Decisions as to who will receive the CAP water and how the restrictions placed on its use will be applied undoubtedly will affect current Arizona water law. The writer analyzes the impact of the Project on Arizona law and the effect of new water distribution organizations created by it.

LIABILITY TO A FAMILY FOR NEGLIGENCE RESULTING IN THE

CONCEPTION AND BIRTH OF A CHILD _____ Donald R. Thayer 181

An analysis of cases in which the negligence of a pharmacist in dispensing oral contraceptives, or a physician in performing sterilization operations has resulted in the birth of an unexpected child. Possible factors behind the apparent trend of allowing damages in these cases are examined and a method of determining damages is proposed.
