Articles

- INTESTATE SUCCESSION AND WILLS: A COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF THE LAW OF ARIZONA AND THE UNIFORM PROBATE CODE ..... Daniel H. O'Connell 205
and
Richard W. Effland

Arizona is about to revise its probate law by adopting a version of the Uniform Probate Code. The authors examine and compare current law with the Code and the proposed Arizona provisions. Recommendations for further modification and for adoption are made.

- LAW IN COMPUTERS AND COMPUTERS IN LAW: A LAWYER'S VIEW OF THE STATE OF THE ART ..... William E. Boyd 267

That pervasive influence in our lives, electronic data processing, is examined in terms of its impact on lawyers and the law. The author explores sophisticated methods currently proposed for handling the mass of legal information, points out their usefulness, and analyzes their weaknesses.

Note

- ARTIFICIAL ADDITIONS TO RIPARIAN LAND:
EXTENDING THE DOCTRINE OF ACCRETION ..... Robert E. Lundquist 315

The writer examines the doctrines affecting landowners riparian to navigable rivers, and criticizes the recent Bonnelli Cattle Co. decision of the Supreme Court of Arizona. The court's application of the doctrine and of its definition of high-water mark are shown to be contrary to accepted precedent.

Comments

- PROCEDURAL DUE PROCESS IN THE CIVILIAN AND
MILITARY JUSTICE SYSTEMS ..... John F. Munger 344

As the military justice system comes more into the limelight, the differences between it and civilian courts becomes more important to the bar. The writer compares the procedural protections in each system, demonstrating that in some, but not all, cases military defendants are better protected than civilian.
