CONTENTS

Marti Lindsey and Cherokee storyteller, Writingbear, lead an environmental health workshop for high school students. // Courtesy photo

INDIGENOUS LEADERSHIP

LET'S TALK ABOUT WATER Selso Villegas, Tohono O'odham environmental professional, is creating positive change in his community

FEATURE

8

UA PROGRAM ENGINEERS RESEARCH PROJECTS FOR NATIVE AMERICAN STUDENTS

Participants study areas of environmental science including weather and climate, water quality, and aquaponics

PATHWAYS

MEET THE NEXT 2 GENERATION OF INDIGENOUS LEADERS In this issue, Seafha Ramos and Jordan Jimmie discuss how they hope to use their education in environmental science and research to benefit their communities

CONTEST

SEE THE WINNING SUBMISSIONS!

Our first annual student literature and photography contests focused on environmental issues faced by Indigenous communities

ART

23 Frank Waln uses his music to bring awareness to environmental issues like the Keystone XL pipeline

3

"Pay attention to what's going on at home. Stay connected to your community." -Frank Waln // Photo courtesy: Frank Waln

STUDENT RESOURCES UA STUDENT PROGRAMS Information regarding eligibility requirements and deadlines for various UAaffiliated organizations

SPOTLIGHT

THE BRIGHTEST STAR Kelly Redshirt hopes to use her solar oven prototypes to help Navajo families without electricity