

EGYPT AND THE MEDITERRANEAN: CULTURAL CROSSROADS DURING THE FIRST MILLENNIUM BCE AND BEYOND

Giuseppina Capriotti Vittozzi

National Research Council of Italy (CNR)

Institute for the Study on Italic and Ancient Mediterranean Civilization (ISCIMA)

Because ancient Egypt was especially a center of attraction and dissemination for Mediterranean cultures during the first millennium BCE - when the spread of Aegyptiaca and the contribution of the Egyptian culture to the Mediterranean koinè became particularly evident - my own lines of research involve the interdisciplinary investigation of the dialog between Egypt and the Near East, and the Mediterranean world in this time period.

RESEARCH AREAS

- 1) The relation between Egypt and other Mediterranean cultures
 - Egyptian iconography, religion and art in the Mediterranean world
 - Cataclysmic events involving Egypt and Palestine
- 2) Advanced technologies in support of the research (photogrammetry, laser scanner, remote sensing).

RESEARCH TOPICS

RELIGIOUS, ICONOGRAPHIC, AND TECHNOLOGICAL STUDY OF BRONZES OF THE EGYPTIAN MUSEUM IN FLORENCE

Research on metallurgical technologies as markers of intercultural exchanges, in collaboration with S. Siano and M. Miccio (Institute of Applied Physics "N. Carrara" - CNR).
