

Journal of Ancient Egyptian Interconnections

Editorial Announcement

With this issue JAEI begins its fourth year of publication, and we take this opportunity to outline the publication plans for the journal's fourth volume.

The current fascicle of the journal carries three submitted articles and four reviews relating to various aspects of Egyptian interconnections without sharing any particular theme.

The following two fascicles – the June and September issues – will carry a number of articles on the specific theme of Egyptian interconnections with the Levant. These two issues will not only span a great deal of material in this area of Levantine connections, but also will cover important current research being carried out at the threshold of our knowledge of ancient Egypt's relations with its Near Eastern neighbors.

The winter (December) issue of the journal will likewise see a new development for JAEI. For our fourth issue of 2012, JAEI is soliciting short reports from archaeologists whose research and fieldwork reveal connections between ancient Egypt and its neighbors. Taking advantage of our on-line format, these reports will provide researchers an opportunity to disseminate their preliminary results expeditiously. Furthermore, by devoting an entire issue to field reports, JAEI will serve the archaeological community as a "one-stop" source for information on the most current relevant work being done around the Eastern Mediterranean. If your research matches this criterion, please consider submitting a report of up to 2,000 words by October 1, 2012. Please direct inquiries regarding this issue to JAEI's Associate Editor, Robert Schon (rschon@email.arizona.edu). We very much look forward to your submissions.

Scholars seeking to contribute material to the journal are asked to consult the "Guide for Contributors" in the Table of Contents or to send an email to Egypt@u.arizona.edu for further information.
