

About the Authors

Kate Shea (kateshea@arizona.edu) is an Assistant Professor of Practice at the University of Arizona where she works in the English Department with the Second Language Writing and International Foundations Writing student populations. Her research focuses on classroom discourse broadly, with a focus on instructor agency and pedagogical choices in English-medium, transnational classroom contexts.

Onur Ural Burns (onurural@arizona.edu) holds a Ph.D. from the University of Arizona, where he also serves as a faculty member. He is a CELTA-certified language instructor (Certificate in English Language Teaching to Adults) from the University of Cambridge. Prior to his current position, he worked as a Fulbright scholar at the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Monica Rodriguez-Bonces (monicarodriguezbonces@gmail.com) holds a Ph.D. in Economic & Territorial Integration and Development, with emphasis in curriculum development and bilingual education. She also holds an M.A. in Applied Linguistics, an M.A. in Education, and a B.A. in Spanish and Languages. She currently coordinates an interdistrict project on curriculum design for advanced Spanish in South Carolina. She serves as Treasurer of the Latin American Association for Language Testing and Assessment (LAALTA), Vice Chair of the Cinema SIG of ACTFL, and teaches for Rock Hill Schools.

Jeisson Rodriguez-Bonces (jrodriguez@aspenk12.net) holds an M.A. in Applied Linguistics (for English as a Foreign Language) and an M.A. in Teacher Training for Spanish as a Foreign Language (SEL). He is currently a Ph.D. candidate in Educational Technology. Originally from Colombia, he has taught at universities in multiple countries and currently teaches at Aspen High School in Colorado.

Christopher Esposito (chrisaesposito@gmail.com) holds an M.A. in Curriculum & Instruction and an M.A. in Educating Multilingual Learners. He is currently an ESOL professor at South Piedmont Community College and for the U.S. Department of State. Previously, he worked as an international educator and consultant across the United States, Europe, and Latin America.

Vanessa G. Lazo (vanessa.lazo@austincc.edu) upholds excellence in language education as Department Chair of World Languages at Austin Community College, where she oversees 10 language paths. As a Full Professor of Spanish with over 30 years of teaching experience, she is committed to expanding access and opportunity for community college students. She holds a B.A. in German and Spanish from Amherst College, an M.A. in Spanish and Portuguese Language and Literature from NYU, and a Ph.D. in Foreign Language Education from UT Austin. Her work centers technology integration, academic leadership, and transformative learning, supporting both students and teachers.

Hsiaomei Tsai (zinatsai@gmail.com) is a licensed Chinese Dual Language Immersion teacher with over a decade of experience in K-12 education. She holds a PhD from Utah State University. Her research focuses on learning Chinese as a second language, Chinese language teaching pedagogy, dual language education, and Chinese literacy competence.

Kathleen A. J. Mohr, EdD, (kathleen.mohr@usu.edu) is a professor emerita of language and literacy. She taught elementary school students for 15 years before transitioning to higher education. Most recently, at Utah State University, her research focused on accelerating language and literacy acquisition for first- and second-language learners and beginning readers. Her work supports teachers in using research to make their instruction more effective and efficient. Dr. Mohr has mentored more than 40 graduate students and published more than 85 articles and book chapters.

Reza G. Samar (reza.samar@mso.umt.edu) holds a Ph.D. from University of Ottawa, Canada in Applied-Sociolinguistics and specializes in Sociolinguistics (Variation Theory, Bilingualism, Language change, and Discourse Analysis) and its application to Second/Foreign Language Acquisition. Before joining the University of Montana, he was an associate professor of (Socio)linguistics and Applied Linguistics at the University of Tarbiat Modares, Tehran, Iran. He is the author of numerous books like “Aspects of second language speech: a variationist perspective” and “Sociolinguistics: an introduction (in Persian)” and articles appearing as book chapters or in journals such as International Journal of Bilingualism, Language Awareness, Language Sciences, World Englishes, etc.

Zahra Parsaie (zahraparsaieacmia@gmail.com) holds a Master’s degree in TEFL and has extensive experience teaching English as a foreign language to students from diverse countries, including refugee and multicultural learners. Her research focuses on sociolinguistics, language variation and change, language policy, and technology-enhanced language learning. She is currently preparing publications in applied linguistics and second language acquisition, with an emphasis on sociocultural and technological perspectives.

Kiley Specht (kspecht2@wisc.edu) is a Ph.D. Candidate in Spanish Linguistics at the University of Wisconsin–Madison. She holds an M.A. in Spanish Linguistics from UW–Madison and a B.A. in Spanish Education with a French minor from Illinois State University. Her research focuses on second language acquisition, dialect variation, Caribbean Spanish, heritage language learners, bilingualism, and phonology. Her experience teaching Spanish at the high school and post-secondary levels shapes her commitment to researching approaches to improving language education.

Estefania Galindo-Navarro (galindo3@wisc.edu) is a Ph.D. Candidate in Spanish Linguistics at the University of Wisconsin–Madison. She holds an M.A. in Spanish Linguistics from the same institution and a B.A. in Foreign Languages from Universidad del Atlántico. Her research focuses on sociolinguistics, language variation, phonetics & phonology, and bilingualism. Prior to her doctoral studies, she taught English in Colombia and completed a diploma in Teaching Spanish as a Foreign Language at the Caro y Cuervo Institute. She also served as a Reach International Ambassador at UW–Madison.

Rajiv Rao (rgrao@wisc.edu) is a Vilas Distinguished Achievement Professor in the Department of Spanish & Portuguese at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, where he also serves as the director of the Language Sciences Program. His research program focuses primarily on the Spanish sound system as it pertains to bilingualism, heritage and second language acquisition, language contact, sociolinguistics, variation and change, and phonological theory. He is the editor-in-chief of the Heritage Language Journal and co-editor of the book series Issues in Hispanic and Lusophone Linguistics (John Benjamins).

Jaime Fabricio Mejía Mayorga (jfmejiam@arizona.edu / jfmejiamayorga@gmail.com) holds a Ph.D. in Second Language Acquisition and Teaching from the University of Arizona. He is the founder and director of Global Citizens Educational Consulting and Professional Services, LLC and serves as adjunct faculty at the University of Arizona and Pima Community College.

Wesley Gerardo Miller Gostas (wesleymillerg754@gmail.com) holds a B.A. in English Language Teaching from Universidad Pedagógica Nacional Francisco Morazán in Honduras. He has collaborated with the University of Kansas FLAS Program as a Miskitu language and culture instructor. Currently, he works in the Honduran private education sector and is pursuing a graduate certificate in Higher Education Pedagogy.

Zoila Maribel Goff Fonseca (zoilagoff1@gmail.com) holds a B.A. in English Language Teaching from Universidad Pedagógica Nacional Francisco Morazán in Honduras. She is pursuing graduate studies and works in the Honduran public education sector, where she leads a student group dedicated to the promotion of Miskitu culture.

Yilei Li (yileili@arizona.edu) is a doctoral student at the University of Arizona. Her research interests include L2 development, study/work abroad, and the sociocultural approach to L2 practices.