

About the Authors

Elys Putri Karismawati (elysputrika@student.uns.ac.id) is an undergraduate student of English language teacher education at Universitas Sebelas Maret. Her research interests are second language acquisition approach, teacher professional development, technology-integrated teaching and learning, and the use of English as a lingua franca.

Sara Fernández Cuenca (fernans@wfu.edu) is an Assistant Professor of Spanish at Wake Forest University. Her research focuses on instructed second and heritage language acquisition, with a focus on language processing. In addition, she studies applications of technology in the foreign and heritage classroom to optimize language acquisition in Spanish intermediate and advanced language and content-based courses.

Sean Michael Muller (mullsm19@wfu.edu) is an advanced undergraduate student pursuing a major in Spanish and History at Wake Forest University. He is the co-investigator in several linguistic research projects involving Spanish language acquisition and critical language awareness (The Spanish of the US). He is currently studying abroad in Salamanca (Spain) and plans to graduate in May of 2023.

Yiting Han (yiting.han@nie.edu.sg) is a research fellow in Learning Sciences and Assessment Academic Group at National Institute of Education, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. She holds a PhD in Second Language Acquisition and Teaching from the University of Arizona. Her research interests are technology-enhanced language learning and teaching, autonomous/self-regulated learning, life-long learning, and interdisciplinary learning.